BRIGHTON BRACH RACE TRACE, July 20.— There was a large crowd at Brighton Beach track to-day, despite the fact that the weather was not at all pleasant and threat-

A sea fog rolled in about 1 o'clock and for a time shut everything out of sight, while what little breeze there was came from the ocean and was shut off by the back of the stand. This and the sea fog made things close, sticky and uncomfortable.

The programme was a very attractive one, and some interesting sport was expected. The track was still heavy from Saturday's rain, though it had dried out a trifle in spots. The first race brought together a very good

The first race brought together a very good lot of milers, including Tattler. Long Island, Pernwood, Macauley and others.

Tattler opened favorite, but no money went on him and his price receded. It was Long Island's turn evidently, for he was heavily backed into first place, though his past performances did not warrant it.

Fernwood was a good third choice and a great tip was out on Count Budley. Long Island won, and Fernwood beat Tattler out for the place.

Island won, and Fernwood beat Tattler out for the place.

In Michael F. Dwyer to-day purchased the two-year-olds Nomad and Arbita from L J. Rose for $11,000. Mr. Hose is to receive Nomad back again after he is done racing. The second race furnished a dash for a lot of youngsters, with Madrid and St. Mark even up first choices. Circular and Thiers L. were sven choices for place. The race was not a heavy betting one, but bets were made on nearly every horse.

The favorites were never in it. Circular won after a hot fuish, with Thiers L. Irregular was a poor third.

rmed Men Continue to Search Vermont's Hills for Frank Almy.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] HANOVER, N. H., July 20.—It was not Frank Almy, who was captured at Hartford, Vt., yesterday afternoon. The murderer of pretty Christic Warden is still at large, and this vil-lage is still seething with the inpatient anger of men who would wreak summary venge ance could they lay hands upon him.

The talk of lynching was heard all day, yesterday, and there was not one of the band of stern, well-armed men which went out to search the hills and forest, but hoped the murderer would be found before the day was over. But he had disappeared as if the earth had swallowed him.

Probably Emmett Marshall was the last man in this region to see Almy. He it was to whom the murdered girl's sister Fanny ap-Mr. M. F. Dwyer Increases His pealed for all when, finding she could do nothing by sceking to remain with Christie, she turned away from the spot where murder

Almy fired several shots at Fannie Wardefi, ut none of them took effect.

The point by the roadside, just outside the liage, where Christie was seized by her rected lover last Friday night, and whence she was dragged to her fate in the woods, has been visited by hundreds of people and the tory of the tragedy has been rehearsed again and again. "I have come a thousand miles to meet ou," said Almy that night as he suddenly faced the girl in the rongway, where she stood with her mother and sister. He added then, And our time is short."

Then he dragged Christie away, the seven teen-year-old sister clinging and struggling liquor and clgars from William Griffith's saloon, 1865 Malich Harlen Court.

Christie's body has been prepared for burial and her funeral will occur to-morrow. As far as can be, the cruel bruises about her head and face, and the bullet wound under the left eye have been concealed, but marks still show of her awful struggles and suffering at the hands of the man who once proclaimed himself her lover.

" Racing is unquestionably on the decline; the crowds are not so large, the interest not betting ring, and I am afraid if something is not done affairs will grow worse instead of better." These words are attributed to Mr. Lucius Appleby, one of the brainest bookmakers in the country, who is also a horseowner and the proprietor of one of the pretti-est race tracks in the country at Linden,

His remarks carry with them a good deal of weight, for he is clear-headed, and seldom gives his opinion of anything concerning acing unless he has foundations of facts upon which to back his assertions. His utterances are painfully true. There is a lack of interest in racing, but it is not due to the fact that racing is less attractive than it ever was before. It is because public confidence has been

which there have been so many blunders made in racing affairs. The declaring off of bets in the fifth race Saturday was a blunder PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—The Press this should have been taken. The reason given orning prints an interview with Senator was that the Eisinore colt ran away, jumped Quay in which the latter is credited with dis- a tence and threw his jockey. The colt was The Board of Stewards then asked whether the ring wanted a new book. Most certainly has been a light the public was a decided injustice to the public, which has been their money at good prices. After the decision they would not get half the odds first quoted, and the bookmakers, knowing which horses would be backed, laid no kind of prices against them. It is such occurrences as this which discontent the public and which, no doubt, form the basis of Mr. Appleby's remarks.

There is a remedy, and it should be adopted at once. Abolish the Board of Stewards. They are not practical racing men, and, therefore, are not qualified to adjudicate matters to the satisfaction of a practical racing public. Their places should be taken by three practical judges, who should have absolute control over the racing day by day. heir decision would be accepted without a murmur, and the Board of Control would not be called upon to settle the triffing disputes which are constantly cropping out nearly every day.
